TRIBUTE TO WARREN INDUSTRIES. The Warren Kiwanis Club has prepared a window display in the J. C. Penney Co. in recognition of Warren's industries for Pennsylvania Week. Pictures of the major manufacturing plants exhibited with a tribute which reads, "Warren Kiwanis salutes Warren industries and all industrial workers".

FOR OUR PENNSYLVANIA WEEK AMBASSADOR. Rear Admiral Robert Lee Dennison was the recipient of the Pennsylvania Week awards as displayed in the window of the Warren National Bank during the past week. Myron Munson arranged the exhibit which included a hand-lettered framed scroll, furnished by the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce, and a hand-wrought aluminum plaque with leather brief-case cover, which is given to all former Pennsylvanians receiving the ambassador award, by the Aluminum Company of America.

CUBS PROMOTE PENNSYLVANIA WEEK. Cub Scout Pack 47, sponsored by Home Street school, prepared the window of Wendelboe's in observance of Pennsylvania Week. A display of handcraft items in the shadow of the American and Cub flags illustrates the Cub's desire to serve his county, and state.

Council Turns Down Zoning Change

The proposal to change Fourth ave., between Liberty and Hickory, from residential to commercial classification under the borough zoning ordinance, was voted down, 15 to 1, by the Warren borough council, Monday night. Blain Mead, Fifth Ward councilman, was the one councilman who voted in favor of the change.

Council first voted to accept and approve the planning commission's report. This report stated that the commission was unanimously opposed to the change. The report gave several reasons for this decision. One was the belief that such a change would be detrimental to existing property. The commission also said that Warren has too much commercial area already, seven per cent, which is higher than some towns. It claimed only half of this seven per cent is used.

It said the change would decrease the value of existing commercial areas by discouraging improvements to present buildings. And it said that no change has occurred since the zoning ordinance was first passed which suggests the need for such an amendment.

R. W. Steber then presented three remonstrances against the zoning change, claiming that the signers greatly exceeded the 20 per cent necessary to force a three-fourths majority.

Attorney Samuel Bonavita, representing Loblaw's Grocery, which wants to build in this area, and initiated the proceedings, then entered several questions into the record. He questioned the right of W. T. Davidson to act on the question as a commissioner when he also was a petitioner and had thus indicated a previous opinion. He asked that this be recorded as an objection.

He questioned the commission's statement concerning the effect on property values, and wondered if this opinion were personal or whether real estate authorities had been consulted.

He suggested that Warren's commercial proportion might seem large because of the distorted result provided by the length of Pennsylvania ave., much of which is commercial. He said this was the first request to increase an area.

He reminded council that despite innuendos, the people on the petition for the change have been proved to be residents of Warren.

He also objected to Councilmen Frantz and Emery voting on the same question which they also adversely considered as members of the commission. He asked council to record this objection.

Mr. Steber then asked, who had brought the pressure, and said that the attorney's statements were personal opinion and personal innuendo.

Councilman Frantz said it was not a personal problem, and that the question went beyond Loblaw grocery and personal objections. He said the question was whether to open up this area to all the types of buildings and businesses which would be allowed under a C-3 classification.

Council then ruled that Emery and Frantz could vote, and the count was taken.

President Laskaris appointed a special committee to study future proposals before they are presented as zoning ordinance amendments. He named Councilmen Frantz, Miller, and Painter.

Council voted to advertise for a group bid on cars for the police, borough manager, and the street department. Councilman Carbon

GIRL SCOUT MOTIF. The display in the window of Metzger-Wright Company combines an anticipated Girl Scout activity and Pennsylvania Week interests. Featuring camping gear and equipment with the heading, "Appalachian Trail, 1955", it reminds the viewer of the proposed summer hike along a portion of the famous trail which stretches from Mt. Kahtadin, Me. to Lookout Mountain, Ga. The Scouts of Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, Maryland and District of Columbia hope to cover the entire sixteen hundred miles with each council group stepping off a proportionately shorter distance. Last year, the girls walked thirteen arduous miles.

SCAT BACK. This, we believe, is Fucci, Meadville speedster, who almost tied up Saturday's ball game. However, another man who is fast in the legs, Don Mahaffey, got out there soon enough to spoil the end run and stop Meadville on the four. It got no further and Warren won, 6 to 0.

asked why a fleet price was not obtained from the manufacturer if this were to be the practice. It was intimated that such might result.

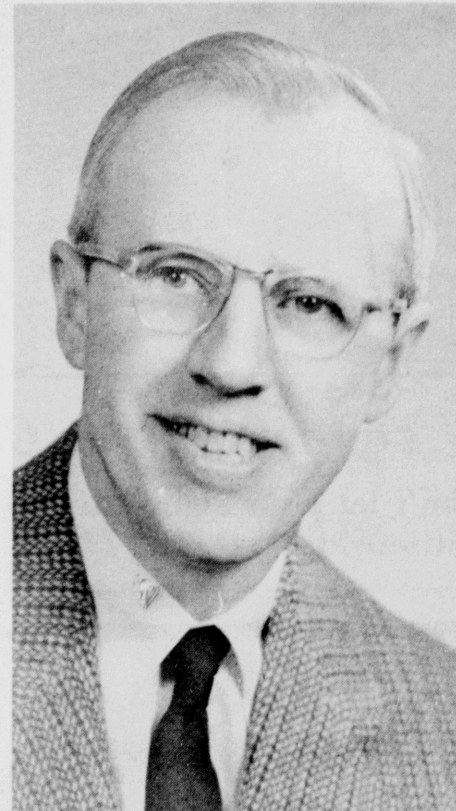

Funds were appropriated to repair walks and curbing on the west approach to the Conewango Creek bridge on Pennsylvania ave., and bids will be asked for a bituminous spreader.

Council passed an ordinance amendment putting teeth into the law requiring residents to repair their walks. The penalty now is $50, or ten days in jail.

Councilmen Painter and Patchen alternated proposing new policemen and firemen, with James Wilson and Robert Rowley being added to the police department, and Paul A. Drescher being made a hoseman. Officer Gary Bean was given two weeks leave without pay. And the compensation for the police clerk, Harry Beck, was increased to $175 a month.

The resignation of Officer Ed Leonard was accepted. He has joined the state police and now is attending police school.

Council adjourned to October 25 when the paving assessment list will be read and the finance committee will open talks about the coming budget.

ANOTHER BOOK. Ernest C. Miller, of Warren, noted for his oil history study, has written a booklet for the Pennsylvania Historical Association, called Pennsylvania's Oil Industry. It is brief and fascinating.

A New Physical Director for the Warren YMCA has been named. He is Robert Hammerbeck, a Warren boy, who attended Salem College and has been employed as a United States national security agent in Washington. He will succeed Herb Pfuhl who recently resigned to enter private industry.

Political Debating on state issues will be heard on the Warren radio a week from Sunday. Assemblyman Allen Gibson will meet his opponent, Lewis Crippen. The time is not decided.

The Resignation of Floyd W. Bathurst was accepted by the Warren Area school board at its regular meeting Monday evening. Mr. Bathurst served as a teacher in the local school from 1919 to 1925 when he was accepted as principal of the local high school. He served as principal until his resignation in January of this year when he was succeeded by Joseph Passaro. During this school year he has been teaching English and a review class in Mathematics.

Mrs. Arlene Whitehill, a former teacher of home economics in Warren and Sheffield schools, was accepted by the Board as a replacement for Mr. Bathurst for the balance of the present school term.

Don't Forget, Monday night at eight, says the McClintock PTA, publicity chairman. The regular meeting is set for that hour.

In The New Yorker may be seen a speech made by our Congressman, Leon H. Gavin. He may not accomplish much for Warren county in the halls of Congress, but he at least is good for a laugh.

Dewey To Court?

By Doris Fleeson

PORTLAND, Oregon -- By all the rules of politics, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York has first call on the Supreme Court vacancy resulting from the death of Justice Robert H. Jackson.

Gov. Dewey supplied the political know-how and the trained people that transformed the amorphous, rudderless Eisenhower drift at Chicago into an irresistible force. He also furnished the cold nerve required to take on the party idol, the late Senator Robert A. Taft, at that convention.

If any one thing became clear after Chicago, it was that President Eisenhower could or would not have been able to do this for himself. Gov. Dewey necessarily returned to his New York responsibilities, and Senator Taft until his death ran the legislative program and was the single most powerful influence on the White House.

The debt to Dewey remains to be collected and, as he is retiring as Governor of New York, he is in a position to collect it.

No one has yet seen clearly into Dewey's mind at this point and can tell what he wants. Those who know him best think he prefers power to money; yet he has voluntarily relinquished control of New York State, which is from a political point of view the greatest powerhouse and seed-bed of Presidents in the country.

Perhaps he felt that having twice achieved the nomination for the Presidency through normal channels, he had to wait for it to come to him by reason of distinguished service. The Supreme Court is certainly a possible place to render it.

Republicans went to the court in 1912 for a nominee -- the late Charles Evans Hughes. Of late years, as the court became increasingly involved with social and economic change, the politicians have more and more openly looked at it for potential candidates. And the justices have been willing as, for example, the late Chief Justice Vinson, the late Justices Jackson and Murphy, and Justice Douglas.

Republicans who talk of what they will do if Eisenhower does not run again have already begun to talk of Chief Justice Earl Warren, especially since the segregation decision which bears his name would have a powerful pull in the great pivotal states.

The current Attorney General is always an obvious possibility for the high court. The President began his term with obvious regard for the reliance of Herbert Brownell, the Dewey lieutenant in charge at Chicago. There is no evidence that that regard has lessened.

What has happened, however, is that key Senators, including the elder statesmen whose opinion in such matters as the Supreme Court carry such great and non-partisan weight, have taken a dim view of Attorney General Brownell's legal qualifications. This is aside from partisan politics. He naturally made enemies among the Democrats with his Harry Dexter White show in which he all but accused Harry Truman of treason. But it is such men as the conservative George of Georgia, who says publicly he seems "an extraordinary choice" for Attorney General, that he has to fear.

There is sure to be on Eisenhower, as on past Presidents, pressure to promote the career judges of the lower Federal courts. Many sincere people in both parties were bitterly critical of Roosevelt and Truman for making political appointments to the court and they can be expected to take their story to the White House again.

Commission Plans For Future

With the certain great increase in the human population in Pennsylvania the next twenty years with subsequent industrial growth and more intensive agriculture, it is imperative that additional game lands be acquired for recreational hunting for the coming generation.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission at its regular Commission meeting held September 29-30, 1954, formulated the following policy concerning the expenditure of the monies received and those to be received in the foreseeable future from gas royalties. These funds are now earmarked for capital investments covering the purchase of game lands and for the acquisition of Division Headquarters and other necessary buildings.

Waterfowl Season Opens

The next season appearing on Pennsylvania hunters' calendars will be the waterfowl hunting season. The season on doves closes October 14. The one for snipe ends October 15. The season for woodcock and the one for sora, rails and gallinules continues to November 9, inclusive.

The duck-geese-coot season opens at Noon, October 15, closes at sunset on December 13. The brant season, also begins on October 15, but it ends on November 13. Except for the opening hour of the waterfowl season, and Sundays when no hunting is allowed, hunting for all migratory birds may be enjoyed this year from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset, other than on October 30. On that date, the opening day of the 1954 small game season, hunting for wild birds or animals of any description is unlawful until 9:00 A.M.

This year, the daily bag limit of ducks is 4 and may contain no more than one wood duck and one hooded merganser. The possession limit after the first day is 8, but no more than 2 wood ducks and one hooded merganser may be included in the number. The daily bag for geese (snow geese excepted) is 2. The possession limit, after the first day, is 4. The daily bag or possession limit for coots is 10. On brant the daily and possession limit is 6. The season on snow geese and swans is closed.

Regulations for waterfowl shooting on the Pymatuning Reservoir will be the same in Pennsylvania and Ohio during the 1954 season.

On the Delaware River, below Trenton Falls, the portion lying between Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and in the Pennsylvania Counties of Bucks, Philadelphia and Delaware, the duck, goose and coot season will be the same—November 3 to January 1. The brant dates are October 15 to November 13. Except on November 3, when shooting starts at Noon, the hours will be the same on the Delaware as for inland Pennsylvania.

Sportsmen from this State who plan a waterfowl hunting trip to Canada or Mexico should check with the authorities to learn requirements for bringing such birds into the United States.

Wildlife Habitat Improvement Under Pittman-Robertson Program

In the twelve-month period ending June 30, 1954, many wildlife improvements were accomplished in Pennsylvania through the use of Pittman-Robertson funds. The money was largely used to develop better conditions for resident and migratory game species on state game lands, farm-game projects, federal lands and on areas leased by the Game Commission.

The program is financed from an 11 percent federal excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition. The amount apportioned a state is dependent on the number of hunting licenses sold and the area. After approval of state-recommended projects, federal funds are provided to reimburse the state to the extent of 75 percent of the costs within the amount allotted. Of approximately $730,000 (100 percent) authorized for Commission use in the last Pittman-Robertson year the Commission used federal money in the amount of $547,490, or all but $9.00 of its 75 percent available for work done under the program in Pennsylvania.

The state's wildlife restoration projects over the last fiscal year contain items of interest to the hunters and trappers of Pennsylvania too numerous and varied to describe completely here. These projects, largely food and cover, were administered however on more than 905,000 acres of state game lands, over 1,040,000 acres of cooperative farm-game projects, 475,000 acres of the Allegheny National Forest, 11,000 acres along the Loyalhanna and Conemaugh Flood Control Reservoirs, on approximately 29,240 acres of rabbit farms, and other areas leased by the Game Commission. These endeavors required an outlay for per diem labor, seedlings, seed, lime, fertilizer, and other services and materials supplied through this cooperative federal-state program.

The following will indicate the diversity and extent of the P-R Program on lands administered by the Game Commission. On state game lands and federal or leased lands, with the exception of farm-game projects: 211 game food strips were cleared on a total of nearly 500 acres; 1616 food strips were planted, for a total of about 2700 acres; cover crops on 885 food strips totaled some 1444 acres; 285 food strips purchased aggregated 110 acres; fields mowed to improve sod and nesting cover totaled nearly 3900 acres; fields limed or fertilized came to nearly 1800 acres; woodland borders cut to allow the growth of food and cover for wildlife were made on over 596,000 linear feet of edge that averaged over 58 feet in width; share-crop farmers planted over 1500 acres; and 71 acres of grain were left standing for wildlife by sharecroppers, who turned back to the Commission over 5700 bushels of grain, also.

Seedlings and transplants planted on these lands were evergreens, lespedeza, chestnuts and others. They totaled well over 72,000. Food-bearing trees, shrubs and vines pruned or freed of competitive growth to allow greater production numbered over 39,000.

Similar practices were carried out extensively on farm-game projects over the state.

Research activities under the Pittman-Robertson program included studies of the deer, wild turkey, woodcock and cottontail rabbit. Studies were also conducted on experimental management work on power line right-of-way and the Conemaugh River Flood Control Area. One was the evaluation of the Commission's food and cover program. The agency's duck banding program was another.

Under the marsh development program several impoundments have been completed, others are being constructed and many more are in the planning stage.

The P-R plan in the State is long-range. It offers many opportunities for the betterment of wildlife conditions, which will eventually mean improvement in hunting and trapping results in the Keystone State.

COUNTY NEWS in brief . . .

A Surprise Statewide Alert is planned by the civil defense council for execution sometime during the week of October 24. Sirens will be sounded to signify the exact time, the public will be requested to take shelter, and those in houses and other buildings are requested to draw blinds and curtains as a protection from flying glass.

Warren County civil defense council will hold practice evacuation exercises at 7:00 p. m., Monday, October 25, when people from Warren Borough will be moved to outlying towns in the county. The county firemen will have a surprise exercise during the same week.

Highway Improvements in Warren County for 1954 are above average, according to a report released this week by District Engineer Glenn D. Myers of Franklin. 12.89 miles of highway have been improved of which 4.96 miles were completed by Pennsylvania State Highway Department forces under the direction of Superintendent Warren G. Lowe, and the balance by contractors. Fifty thousand tons of aggregate, nearly five thousand tons of blacktop material, almost three hundred thousand gallons of oil, and over eight hundred thousand pounds of calcium chloride were used in completing the county projects.

Robert H. Jackson, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, was laid to rest in the family burial plot at Frewsburg, N. Y., Wednesday, with an Episcopal service being read by Bishop Lauriston L. Scaife of the Western New York diocese. Pallbearers were members of the Jamestown Bar Ass., with members of the United States Supreme Court as honorary bearers. Previously, Justice Jackson's body lay in state in Washington, D. C. and St. Luke's Episcopal church, Jamestown, allowing hundreds of mourners to pass his bier.

Robert H. Jackson was born near Spring Creek, Pa. sixty-two years ago. He died suddenly of a heart attack in Washington, D. C. on Saturday, October 9.

The special funeral train arrived in Warren Wednesday morning, from which the casket was removed and transferred to a hearse for transporting to Jamestown. The family of the late justice rested at the home of personal friends, the J. L. Blairs, until time of departure for the service in Jamestown.

National Nurse Week was observed at the Warren General Hospital with appropriate meetings, according to word received from Miss Dorothy Meldorf, administrator. Monday, the Warren County district of the Pennsylvania Nurses Association heard Mrs. Keller of the Warren State Hospital present a statistical report of Pennsylvania nurses. Tuesday, the staff nurses of Warren General Hospital had a meeting with Carl DeVittorio, registered pharmacist of the Warren medical center, as speaker. Mr. DeVittorio discussed the newer antibiotics. Wednesday, the staff nurses viewed two films on fire prevention presented by members of the Warren fire department.

Teachers Institute will be conducted Friday, October 15 in the Warren High School auditorium with both morning and afternoon sessions. Robert Kazmayer, world traveler and lecturer, will speak on the subject, "The changing World Picture". Newspaper Mailing Costs

We have mentioned several times the battle going on between the press and the post office heads who want to increase the price of mailing newspapers. The second class mail privilege was created long ago to assure freedom of the press in America. Legitimate newspapers who have bonafide circulation and carry a large percentage of news, features, and stories are entitled to this rate.

The price has been inched up, at about ten per cent every few months, which up to now hasn't had much effect on the cost of most newspapers, but will eventually be passed on to the consumer if the inching turns into feet.

The major publications have pretended that this is of little interest to them but should be fought as a protection to the small papers. of course, makes a fine front but doesn't hold up when the dollars are studied. It would take quite a pile of weeklies and small dailies to equal the increased cost to any one of the major publications if post office officials ever succeed in making second class mail pay its own way.

For example, away back in 1952, Life magazine paid $1,273,000 in postage for one quarter. The post office said the cost of its handling these magazines for the single quarter was $3,424,000. This meant a loss of $2,151,000. At this rate the yearly loss for handling this one major magazine was over eight million dollars, and if the postage were to be increased enough to cover the cost the magazine would have to pay an additional eight million. This, of course, would be passed on to the reader.

The Saturday Evening Post cost the post office over six million dollars above the postage paid, Colliers ran the postal department nearly five million in the red.

Getting into the newspaper field we find that the New York Times paid $211,000 for its postage in a three months period. This was $425,000 short of the cost, says the postal department. Which means the government, or you, paid the loss required to mail nearly eight million papers. For a full year it was $1,700,000!

These major publications know that they will have to pass this along to the reader if the taxpayer ceases to pay the loss. The postmaster says he would like the readers to pay for it. The big papers say this will be hard on the little country papers and attempt to enlist the thousands of small publishers in the battle against higher rates.

But let's face it. Under the present second class mail set-up the legitimate papers have a good deal. Our mailing cost per paper is peanuts. If it is enlarged to a point where it becomes a major item, the cost will have to be borne by the subscriber.

And so it really is up to the readers. Do they believe the mailing of papers and magazines is sufficiently important in a free country to have a part of the cost distributed among all the taxpayers, or should the reader bear the cost? In this nation where we help many of our basic industries with regular subsidies, is it also good to have a subsidy for the publishers whose duty it is to maintain one of our major freedoms? With a budget that runs into the billions, a few million lost for the maintenance of a freedom are not apt to excite the thinking citizen.

Have Something Coming?

Social security officials ask us to remind you again that you may have some money coming if you are the survivor of some one who was not covered by the law under the old set-up. The new law makes it possible for a survivor to collect benefits if the worker had even six quarters of coverage before September 1, 1950.

If you are a Warren county resident the quickest way to learn the facts is to visit the state armory on Hickory st., in Warren, on Tuesdays or Fridays, between 10:30 a. m. and 1 p. m.

Harvest Days

Good buys are supposed to be plentiful in Warren on Friday and Saturday of this week. At least thirty merchants are teaming up on what are called Harvest Days, with specials lying all about ready to be gathered in.

Watch Your Address

If you are one of those who are taking advantage of the new "junk mail" program initiated by the post office, do not try it in Canada. Under this set-up you need only place your third class mail in the hands of the postal employees and they will see that it reaches all local addresses. You do not need to address each piece with a specific name or number.

But Canada is not going along on the idea. It still insists that a piece of mail be addressed to a specific person. Mail otherwise addressed is not accepted.

A Good Buy

This is a good year to be vaccinated against influenza unless your doctor advises against it. Health authorities are being quoted as believing that the winter of 1954-55 may produce an epidemic. Servicemen are being vaccinated throughout the world before November 15.

If it comes as predicted it will be type A which pays a visit in two-year cycles. Also, the disease often hits this country after it has been active in Africa, Australia, and the Philippines. There were outbreaks of it in those spots this summer.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

By John Crosby

BIGGER AND BIGGER

Every so often, about once every two years, I like to take Hollywood's pulse, one of the most erratic heartbeats there is. Five years ago, I recall the atmosphere was one of unalloyed gloom. Warner Brothers was shut tight. Actors were selling second hand cars for eating money. Two years ago, the actors were back before the cameras again — but they were TV cameras. The movie people were getting over their original terror at TV but were still pretty grimlipped.

Today, the air of prosperity in both TV and movie industries is overwhelming. Movies may not be better than ever but they're certainly bigger than ever and they're making as much money as ever. In sheer size and splendor, they're hasn't been anything like the premiere of "A Star Is Born" in Hollywood for years. The excellence of this movie doesn't anywhere near match the opulence of the opening but that detail was slightly lost sight of in the general fanfare. The following night came the opening of Chrysler's "Shower of Stars" which may be the most plush television opening to come along so far — though it may be surpassed before this even hits print.

The smell of money, in short, is overpowering and it's everywhere. Movie stars who have for years turned down television because their marquee value was still strong, are succumbing fast because there seems to be no limit to the amounts of money offered them. If they turn down one sum, the offer is upped another $10,000 the next day. Eventually the price is right. Joseph Cotton, a longtime holdout, has finally made his first TV appearance and will appear in an upcoming "Best of Broadway" play. Even Humphrey Bogart, who seems to be in every movie they put out these days, is considering doing his original stage and screen role in "The Petrified Forest" on the same series.

Well, I enjoy seeing the actors get so rich but it does lead to some special problems. I bumped into one director freshly arrived in Hollywood from New York, where he directed TV dramas. He was slightly dazed by it all. "In New York," he explained, "We'd get a script we thought was pretty good. Then we'd scout around for the actors we thought best suited for the roles. Out here, you come to work and they've already hired some big shot actor for about $40,000 — or maybe two bigshots — and you got to go look for a script that will make sense — and will also please the big shots."

This is the star system with a vengeance, something even the movies have pretty well outgrown, and it leads to such strange matings of talent as Mario Lanza, Betty Grable and Harry James in one show. Any day now, we may turn on the set and see a color spectacular starring Ethel Barrymore, Peter Lorre and Lassie — simply because they all happened to be standing around with fat contracts in their pockets when the time came.

Not everyone is entirely happy about all this wild prosperity. One CBS executive, surveying about 1,000 people munching an elaborate dinner after the Chrysler spectacular, declared, somewhat irritably: "We must never forget that our bread and butter comes from Burns and Allen and the other half-an-hour regulars once a week." One gets the definite impression that CBS would rather never have got into this mad race to see who could devise the biggest and most expensive and most star-ridden show but were pushed into it by NBC.

God knows the color spectaculars, the hour-long dramas with their all-star casts and the other extravaganzas have not been unqualified successes but they have given television a sense of excitement and unexpectedness that has been very refreshing. I have an idea that — whether one network decreed it that way or not — television was bound to kick up its heels in unexpected ways. Time and again, the industry has shown that it will not and cannot settle down to a nice comfortable twenty-five year sleep like radio.

The emphasis this year is on bigness and, at the moment, there seems no end to how big the shows will be. (Coming along, a week from Sunday is David Selznick's "Light's Diamond Jubilee." Two hours. Four networks. $1,000,000.) Wandering around CBS's cavernous Television City where the sets are beginning to approach the dimensions of the movies, I get to thinking that it seems like only yesterday the biggest stars on television were "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" who are only about a foot high.

Oil In Brief

We just finished reading a small booklet on the Pennsylvania Oil Industry. It is short enough not to scare you away from what seems like a very technical subject, and sufficiently interesting to keep you reading once you get into it.

It should be of great interest to anyone whose parents and those before them had a part in this area's history. Called "Pennsylvania's Oil Industry," it is the work of Ernest C. Miller, of Warren, who is known for his knowledge of oil history. It was prepared for the Pennsylvania Historical Association and is the fourth of a series of Pennsylvania history studies.

Mr. Miller comes from an oil family and did advanced work on the subject while attending Pennsylvania State University. He is an employe of the West Penn Oil Co.

The little booklet relates the early events leading up to the discovery of oil, reviews the big boom days in Pennsylvania oil fields, tells about such places as Pithole City where money changed hands in large cash amounts and life was like what we read about in gold rush days.

He also discusses the war for control of oil and its transportation, with Rockefeller playing the major role. And he winds it up with chapters on the oil fields of today and a crystal ball on Pennsylvania's future.

The library should have a copy if you would like to enjoy a few minutes of exciting history relating to the part of the nation in which you reside.

Nancy In Met

Nancy King, Tidioute girl who has made good in New York ballet circles, has signed a contract with the Metropolitan Opera Company for a part in "Aida" which will start November 8. It also will go on tour in the spring. This will be the second time for Nancy on television, though this one will be limited to selected movie theatres.

Where Are The Sponsors?

Warren county has developed into an area devoid of main attractions when it comes to the principal forms of sport. We have no pro football, independent basketball, or semi-pro baseball. Warren with about 800 boys playing hot stove baseball every summer can't muster together one representative team.

We wonder if the years of hot stove activity have failed to produce any capable players or whether it is a lack of backers. It requires both the skilled performers and the enthusiastic sponsor to assure independent teams.

It is not an inexpensive hobby, but if it is well done it can produce enough return to greatly reduce the losses. The Warren Red Jackets might be going yet if there had been some one to write out a $2,000 check each fall. In fact, if he had handled his squad in a way which would have produced lively, well played football, he might have come out about even.

Of course it is the professional team which needs the lights. Football can get along with a good break on Sunday afternoons, but to avoid competition with the big pros on TV the night game would be ideal today. Pony league ball must have night play because of the many games required.

But a good start along the road back would be a sponsor or two with good health in the pocketbook, plus the enthusiasm and knowledge to personally have at least some part in operating the team.

Warren is ripe for a few major basketball attractions. For several years we have been asked by Abe Saperstein to bring his Globe Trotters into Warren. This year we turned the letter over to the Jaycees. It should be a money-maker.

The date asked by the Trotters was November 17. We now note that they will be in Erie on the 16th. They offered to bring the House of David team along and to meet a team or two from Warren, and to wind it up by playing each other. All this on a share basis.

An organized team, well trained and coached, could take advantage of these offers, and could play the leading area opposition from Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Erie. Several of the big pro league teams would be happy to come in for exhibitions, and the colleges always are willing to play some pre-season practice games.

There would be some loss in all seasons, but if you could find a sponsor big enough he might even benefit by such a proposition. Instead of writing it off as advertising, which might be difficult on such a scale, he could put it down as a business effort that was losing money.

Or if he were a real sportsman, and this is the kind of guy we are really talking about, he wouldn't care if he did drop a thousand on each of the three major sports each season.

Warren Takes Big One

Warren got six points and Meadville failed to score. You can talk statistics all winter but they pay off in touchdowns. The Dragons won a tough game and they earned it with some of their best play of the season. Also some of their worst.

Meadville gained over 300 yards to Warren's 70, less penalties. These added up to 70 yards for the Dogs, but they earned them and were paid off accordingly. It was a pleasure watching officials finally remember they have a whistle.

It wasn't all whistle that stopped those Bulldogs. Most of their yardage was of the easy mid-field variety. When they got near pay dirt the charging Dragons took over, inflicting heavy losses. Though the Warren boys didn't intercept a single pass of the 17 tossed by the visitors, they rushed the passer so well that only six were completed, and the passer several times was nailed far behind his line.

Meadville made two major errors. It committed too many violations and it called too many passes. It opened large holes in the Warren center wall with consistent success, then tried passes.

However, those holes in the line were not there when the ball got within hailing distance of the Warren goal line. Only once did the invaders get close to scoring. Then they lost on a pair of plays, fooled the Dragons on an end run, but not enough to outspeed Don Mahaffey who caught the ball lugger on the four, and ended their drive with an attempt at that soft center, which proved very unsoft. That was the ball game.

Warren's score came after Foley had busted up a kick. A penalty put the ball on the Meadville 9, and Mohny didn't fool around. He busted right over in a single play. In fact, Mohny didn't fool around all afternoon. He gained almost all the yardage, looked well on defense, and kept the opposition back on its heels with punts that averaged 36 yards from scrimmage, in contrast to the 18 Meadville average.

Warren's offense bogged down, showed no finesse, and seldom got out of its backfield area. But it looks worse on paper than it really was because of the times the ball was lost, twice on passes, and once on the opening play of the game through a fumble. In a close game, such lost opportunities give the opponent more time with the ball and you far less.

Warren really knocked on the door more often than Meadville, but twice those pass interceptions cost it an opportunity. But when the chance came in the third stanza the Blue and White youngsters had it.

Now it is a trip to Bradford, Friday night. The Owls always are rugged, even when suffering a mediocre season, like this one. But Bradford's record is mis-leading. It doesn't have any soft spots on its schedule. Any team which has beaten the Owls probably would be very tough for Warren to handle.

If the boys can get their offense rolling, with blocking, variety, and full use of their potentials, a coveted victory over Bradford would add much to their season's record. And we believe they have a fifty-fifty chance of doing it.

Home-Coming?

Because of polio in Ridgway and its cancelling of a game with Smethport, many are asking if there will be a home coming game in Warren, October 23. Ridgway was to have been the opponent. School officials are looking for schools with an open date, and if Ridgway does not give an affirmative answer by Friday of this week, another will be scheduled. It probably will be a New York school, if one can be found. Olean is likely.

County Champs

The Youngsville high school team took the football championship of Warren county last Saturday by defeating Sheffield, 13 to 7. Previously it had beaten Northern Area. Warren, which is playing Class A league ball, does not participate. Perhaps the Warren junior varsity should play in this competition. It would offer good experience and no doubt some good games.

Area Action

Warren took Meadville, 6 to 0. Youngsville beat Sheffield, 13 to 7, and Northern Area tied Westfield, 19 to 19.

Corry got back on the track with an 18 to 7 defeat of Grove City. It now meets Titusville in what is bound to be real battle.

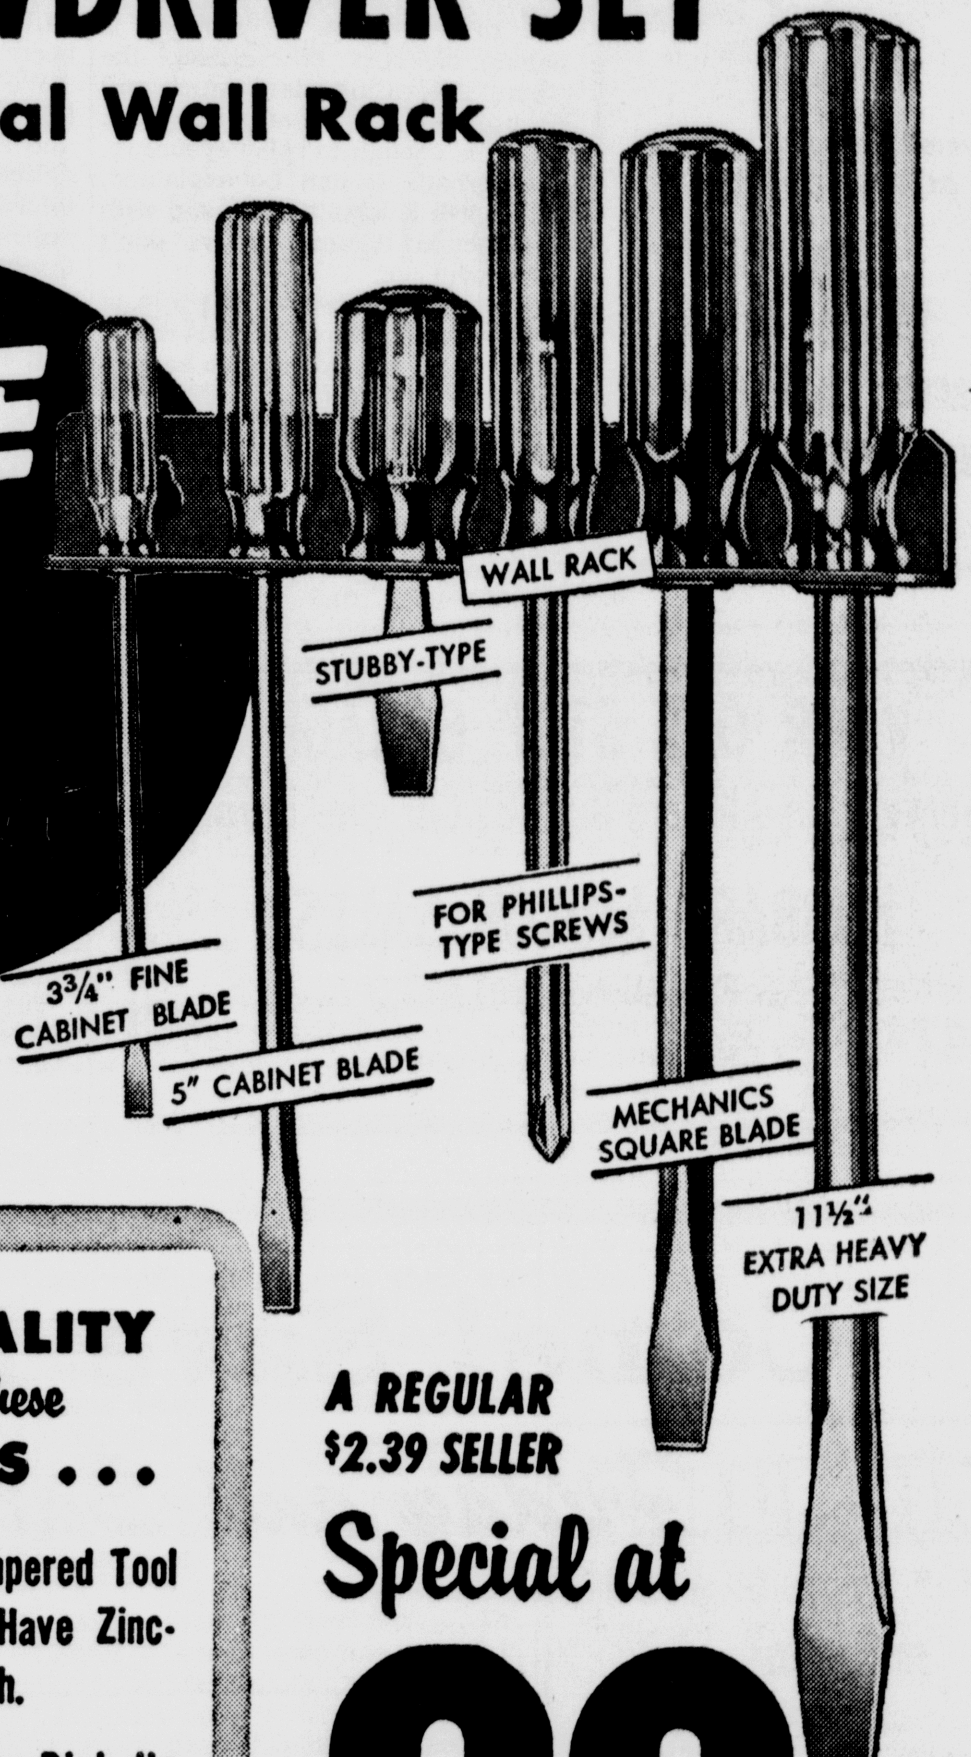

Franklin took Girard, 13 to 7. Titusville got by Hickory, 13 to 6. Kane plastered Port Allegany, 41 to 12. Ridgway beat Brookville, 20 to 0.

Erie Strong Vincent edged Bradford, 21 to 13. Millcreek finally got going by slapping Erie Tech, 19 to 6. Johnstown slugged Erie East, 46 to 6. Erie Prep slipped past Academy, 2 to 0, completely confusing the city series standings, with Prep now having a victory and a tie.

Greenville moved along, 38 to 0 over Mercer. Sharon beat Youngstown Wilson, 26-6.

And Jamestown, that big one we are watching, took Lockport, 26 to 0. Yipes! Another future opponent, Dunkirk, lost to North Tonawanda, 20 to 0. Both teams can be seen in action Saturday night, at Jamestown.

Golf . . . Yet

Warren lady golfers did very well in the United States Senior tournament at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y. Mrs. David Beaty and Mrs. H. L. Banghart were second low net in the two ball foursome. Mrs. Beaty also had the low net for the two days in the grandmothers division. Mrs. Banghart shot the low net in division two on Thursday, and Mrs. J. L. Blair was low net in that division on Wednesday. Mrs. E. G. Hamilton was second best on the putting greens in division one on Wednesday.

Up Jamestown way Toby Lyons got his amateur tournament off Sunday, despite bad weather. It was won by Lyle Larson of Kane, who had a 73.

Look, No Pin Boys

The first installation of fully automatic pin-setters in this area has been made in the Pine Street alleys in Jamestown, managed by Sam Munella. The high cost of the new gadgets, the slow delivery, and the need for higher prices to make them pay, may keep them out of the Warren area for a few years. However, other makes are coming onto the market, including one by Brunswick, and competition may bring the prices down to normal.

OBSERVATIONS
By Bob Walsh

Enter, The Power Line

The major portion of the press seems to be skipping daintily about the edges of the Dixon-Yates contract and related hearings. This is too bad, because it is of public interest and those making the decisions should have the benefit of a thorough public sounding by the press.

You probably know that this combine was given the contract for providing electric power to our government plants in the TVA area. We say "given" because there were no bids considered. Those with the job of formally allotting the contract were ordered by the administration to give it to this firm. And the government is paying the cost of building the steam generating plant which will be used by the private company.

This is enough to raise eyebrows, but perhaps it can be explained. Up to now it hasn't been, and with an election coming up we don't know why not.

However, related to this bit of Washington high-handedness, which we probably should say can happen under all parties (just to allay suspicion that we are playing politics), are the hearings being held on violations of the holding company act. This will bust loose soon, though if we know the major press it will be toned down until after the big day in November.

But it is beginning to have a slight tinge of violation and suggests that a ring of electric companies in the south are little more than names with the officers also serving in name only. Double book-keeping, one for tax purposes and the other for paying dividends, is a major part of the testimony.

It is getting quite interesting if you can find a story on it to read. Without a wide selection of reference sources the average citizen is out of luck.

Clean It Up

We finally saw on War Memorial field last Saturday what we had been waiting for all season officials unafraid to toot that whistle. And the result was that a powerful team was taught a lesson. If Meadville had played clean football the entire game it might have been a different result.

We have been mighty close to a big share of the play this season, and it has disgusted us to see the deliberately rough play that is tolerated. If we can see those punches swung the officials certainly can.

Otto Graham writes in a late issue of Sports Illustrated that football is becoming vicious and that it must be cleaned up if it is not to be ruined. Here is a man who ought to know. When the pros start objecting the situation must be bad.

Graham says the pros are wearing masks and are not ashamed of it. He says high school and college players wear these only to protect an injury and are afraid to don one if they are in good physical condition for fear of ridicule. He thinks this is childish.

But why should it become a game of the man in the iron mask? It is a hard-hitting, tough game at the best, and mistakes will be made, but the deliberate foul is out of place. Before it becomes an unnecessarily crippling sport something should be done.

There are two obvious solutions. The coaches certainly can discourage such tactics and can agree through their association to do so. And the officials can put that whistle to work. This they must do as a group, because those who try to pioneer the procedure probably will be without work.

It is a good, healthy sport, with plenty of jars for the boy who likes physical contact. Without going to the extreme of present basketball whistling it can be kept out of the slugging, gouging, kneeling, kicking, and tripping class. If we aren't teaching sportsmanship, what are we teaching?

Whites Need Help
We note that an organization has been formed for the advancement of white people. Anyone who becomes a part of this movement obviously is in need of advancement. Proof of which may be found in their attitude toward the negro.

Speed Warning
Now they have a siren that tells you when you are going too fast. Here are great possibilities. Its first application will be in critical spots, such as school areas. You drive over a pair of hoses and your speed is recorded. If it is too fast a siren blares at you a few feet beyond the last contact. It could be placed on stretches of highway also, with a signal device to police. This would follow up the forewarning with a visit by a police car. A recording camera to catch your license would complete the story. The siren soon would become more than a noise at which some might laugh.

A Missed Opportunity
There are a large number of people who are missing an opportunity to learn how to drive an automobile. The Warren Area Joint School board makes such classes available for adults as well as students. But very few of those residing outside of Warren take advantage of the opportunity. If your township is one of those affiliated with the jointure, contact the school office if you are interested in driver training.

Benjamin Rush
This year's winner of the Benjamin Rush award in Pennsylvania, given to an individual for outstanding promotion of better health, is an inspiration. He is Edmund J. Maxwell, who lost his voice nine years ago when surgeons removed vital portions of his larynx to defeat a cancer. Mr. Maxwell learned to talk by using swallowed air and resolved to teach others. He devoted thirty hours a week visiting hospitals, and encouraged people to visit his home for additional help. He taught over two hundred to talk.
In May of 1951 he founded the Philadelphia Laryngects, with three hundred victims of this operation, and speech classes are held three times a week. Ten teachers have been trained, but the participants also help each other to regain their speech.

The group award went to the Washington Lions Club which has maintained an eye clinic in the hospital for fifteen years, has donated $13,000 to health groups in the past five years, has conducted a blind survey, and has promoted an examination of first and second grade school children to uncover visual deficiencies.

Happiness Fund
If you would like to help put Christmas smiles on the faces of children who do not have the pleasure of a normal family life when the major holiday of the year comes around, the Children's Aid Society will welcome your assistance. It has a special fund, called the Happiness Fund, which consists of contributions from interested people. It is used to provide gifts for children in Children's Aid Society homes. Mail yours to the Children's Aid Society, Box 628, Warren, Pa.

Ike Aloof
Though the bulk of the press is considered Republican, at least in the front office, a big share of the boys and girls who have the job of obtaining and writing the facts are apt to be very independent. It was this group which got Roosevelt a good press despite editorial opposition. He opened up and proved to be good news. They naturally liked that.
This is where our President of today may be making a major error. He is at the opposite extreme. The top brass of the publishing world is with him, but he is proving so aloof that he is losing contact with the working press. It may prove to be one of the hurdles which will be too much in this year's election.

AVOIDED COLLISION. Wallace Onimus was driving this mammoth trailer truck north on Route 62 Thursday evening, October 7. When nine miles south of Warren he started to pass a car, observed another vehicle pulling into his path, pulled off the highway to avoid a collision, and the shifting load in the trailer forced the entire apparatus over an embankment. The driver, who resides at 6752 Hagerman st., Philadelphia, was not injured but $9,000 in damages were suffered by his rig.

An example is the emphasis given a remark made by Secretary of Defense Wilson. Wilson isn't running for office and he doesn't speak for all Republicans, but his turn of a phrase in a press interview was made the lead part of his story by the working press and it came out as a slap at those who are unemployed but fail to hustle themselves a job.
The President is not counteracting these kind of quotes by his own aloof relations with those who must come up with columns of daily words for their pay checks.

The Signs Are Red

By Thomas L. Stokes

DES MOINES -- Mounting Republican anxiety over the Congressional elections leaves its clues all over.

Perhaps one of the most significant, because it seemed somehow so out of character, was the way Secretary of Agriculture Benson dragged Alger Hiss, Harry Dexter White and Less Pressman into a speech on the farm problem last week at Algona in this state, where Republicans are admittedly hard-pressed in Senatorial and gubernatorial races.

When the serious-minded Secretary of Agriculture finds it necessary -- or someone in Republican headquarters finds it necessary for him -- to exploit the "Red issue," then Republicans are in a quandary. The campaign is taking on a Halloween aspect a little early in the season. Hitherto the Communist issue has been left, on the national level, to Vice President Nixon who is parroting over and over, as he travels up and down the land, the long exploded hoax of "thousands of subversives" being fired by the Eisenhower Administration.

The Republican worry thus manifest in the hobgoblin issue is reflected also in the recent gloomy reports to President Eisenhower by a succession of official scouts about the chances of the Republicans keeping control of Congress. That information precipitated the conference of Republican Congressional leaders that the President called at Denver last Friday.

First of the bearers of bad tidings to arrive was Rep. Charles Halleck of Indiana, House Republican leader who was on his way East from California. He gave the diagnosis -- "We are in a hard fight" -- which was echoed by the others as the best way to phrase their dilemma -- Rep. Richard Simpson of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, who was on his way East on a tour of the country; National Republican Chairman Leonard W. Hall and, finally, the Vice President. The President is apparently to become somewhat more active for the wind-up of the campaign; but he still refuses to stick his neck out and risk his prestige further by campaigning for hard-pressed individual Republicans. He couldn't do that, anyhow, even if so minded -- there are too many of them.

Rep. Halleck put his finger on a failure of a major part of Republican campaign strategy, at least as the President himself envisaged the strategy. This was emphasis on the Administration "program." Mr. Halleck complained about the difficulty of arousing interest in that "program" and he confirmed to the President what anybody who moves around the country -- such as this reporter -- finds to be true.

Despite all the promotion of the Administration program, it was obvious to anyone who had been around Washington a long time that the "program" lacked the dramatic appeal to voters generally which, for example, was found in other times, under far different conditions, in the programs of the Roosevelt era. That was pioneering and lifting a nation off its back at one and the same time. The Eisenhower program, so far as enactments by Congress are concerned, thus far offers nothing new or alluring. It is merely continuation and duplication.

It has been a flop as a positive issue for the Republicans. Yet, negatively, it is being used by Democrats, and effectively in some areas. For instance, many farmers don't care for the part of the program that gave them flexible price supports. Democrats also are making headway with attacks on the tax law as a rich man's tax law. Likewise, people in the West and Southwest are reacting to Democratic criticism of Administration public power, REA and conservation policies.

In view of all of that, it is easy to understand the shift of emphasis to the "Red issue" -- and it is really emphatic when they get Secretary Benson into the act. He said at Algona -- and doubtless will say again and again:

"The Alger Hisses, the Harry Dexter Whites and their fellow travelers no longer occupy high offices. There are no longer the Lee Pressmans in agriculture. This Administration has been moving forward continuously and aggressively in its campaign against traitors, subversives and security risks."

In his campaign, the Vice President is following the carefully planned strategy revealed by this reporter weeks ago when the Administration finally decided to keep Senator Joe McCarthy out of the campaign. That was to use the Vice President for "high level" or "white collar" McCarthyism in the final stages of the campaign.

He is proceeding according to plan in his repetition of the exploded hoax of "thousands of subversives." He sandwiches this into attacks on Democratic candidates as "leftists," "Trumanites" and so on, and always yanks out the much-abused ADA, Americans for Democratic Action, as a straw man to kick around whatever platform he is occupying.

YOUR FOREST RANGER

By L. E. Stotz

Twenty years ago, a forest fire came roaring up the slope from the Hickory Creek drainage toward the top of the plateau, and was stopped by a flanking attack just short of the ridge top by a Forest Service fire fighting crew. When I recently visited this old burn with Frank Rudolph, General District Assistant on the Northern District of the Allegheny National Forest, who helped to fight this fire, he pointed out to me the still visible fire line trench which separated the unburned timber, which is now large enough for pulpwood, and the still unproductive area which suffered from the flames of two decades ago, and from subsequent overbrowsing by a heavy concentration of deer.

So severe was the fire burn that the old burn is still an eyesore. It has never seeded in since with a satisfactory forest cover, and the subsequent overbrowsing by deer which killed most of the young trees which tried to invade the area, and created a conspicuous browse line on the few that succeeded in getting established has added to the unattractiveness.

Now this old burn is being developed into a highly productive wildlife food plot under the terms of the cooperative wildlife agreement between the Allegheny National Forest, and the Pennsylvania Game Commission. Late this summer, under the supervision of Game Protector Dave Titus, the Game Commission machinery moved into the area, and bull-dozed off the scattered overbrowsed trees and shrubs, and prepared the soil on two and one-half acres for the seeding in this fall of a permanent food plot that will benefit turkey, deer and other wildlife.

Immediately adjacent to this newly developed food plot is a stand of dense second growth timber that is part of a ridge top pulpwood sale extending continuously for two and one-half miles. This thinning operation, when completed, will create a better habitat for wildlife on 230 acres of deer and turkey range. Near the other end of this pulpwood sale is a sawtimber sale in progress, covering 375 acres over which a light selective cut is being made, and this sale area joins one covering 200 acres which was cut over for sawlogs last year under the selection system of harvesting.

On these national forest timber sales a minimum of two per cent of the sale area is being devoted exclusively to wildlife habitat development. These wildlife developments might be in the form of one acre clearcuts in which all of the sawlog trees are marked for cutting at the time of the timber sale, and the valuable sawlogs find their way to the sawmill. After the timber sale is closed the smaller unmerchantable trees are later felled, and left lie by the wildlife crew. These clearcuts are specially valuable to grouse and turkey for they accelerate the production of insect life, create dusting areas, and the brush piles provide cover. Or the clearing that is developed might be converted into a permanent food plot if the soil is good, and free from rocks, and it is accessible to a good log road so that farming equipment can be moved in.

Probably no forested area on the Northern Ranger District has suffered so cruelly from an oversized deer herd as the 805 acres contained in these three timber sales between the Queen Run and Hickory Creek drainages. With the bulk of the browse grown far out of reach of a deer, plant life on the forest floor found little opportunity, prior to these timber sales, to establish itself in the dense shade created by a closed canopy overhead, and a herd of undernourished deer patrolling the area and ready to cut short the life of any seedling that tried to establish itself.

As can be seen, positive steps are being taken through active timber sales, and the habitat development work of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, working in and adjacent to the national forest timber sales, to create a better environment for wildlife, and better hunting of both big and small game on the Allegheny National Forest.

Unfortunately, much of this good work will be seriously reduced in its effectiveness by the oversized deer herd. It is estimated that the ratio of antlered to antlerless deer on the Allegheny Forest is about one to twenty-five. With only bucks legal to hunt this year, the average hunter will find that about 69 percent of the deer he encounters on this seriously overstocked range will be antlerless deer, and illegal to hunt. So even a good kill of bucks will have little or no effect on the overstocked condition of the range. Within 4 or 5 years after the timber, covering this 805 acres, is cut, the crowns of the remaining trees can be expected to close again, and little new vegetation can be expected to establish itself in the shade. If we still have a buck law then, food conditions will again decline, despite the opening up of the stands of timber, 5 years previously and we will be back where we started in 1954.

Forest fires are now largely under control on the Allegheny National Forest; active timber sales cover thousands of acres each year; the cooperative wildlife program, entered into with the Pennsylvania Game Commission, is progressing nicely. All of these things add up to a potentially better environment for all manner of game, both large and small. This means that a lot of good work has been done. But the most important task is still ahead of us before we get on top of the job. That task is the achieving of a better balance between the size of our deer herd and the capacity of our range to support that herd.

Warren Police "Accident Spot Maps" Aid Public; Bring State Recognition

Even though traffic has increased an average of ten percent per year, the $637 property damage resulting from motor accidents during the month of September is the lowest for the borough of Warren in at least ten years. This announcement from the police department was issued by Chief Mike Evan last week.

Interesting and informative are the two Accident Spot Maps which are placed in prominent positions in the lobby of the borough police department in Warren's municipal building. They graphically illustrate the comparison of the current year's record with the previous year - little colored pins stand as permanent mementos of driving lapses, carelessness, and pedestrian apathy.

Spotted on the maps are the exact positions where the accidents occurred, the pins by color depict the nature and estimated cost of the property damages involved - "black" represents a fatality; "white" calls attention to pedestrian involvement; and one of eight other colors are used to show at a glance the division of property damage costs in which the accident is confined.

As the number of pins placed on the map increases during the year, the accident pattern begins to take shape and soon particular danger spots become apparent. By close scrutiny of "pin formations", areas for selective enforcement may be ascertained and the sites are carefully examined in an effort to eliminate hazards responsible for accidents.

Pennsylvania ave., the longest street in the borough and the channel for the greatest amount of through traffic, is noted for annually leading the accident parade, fifty percent of which is caused by transient drivers. The one fatal accident for 1953 (tabbed "fatal" on the map for immediate locating) was caused by a vehicle traveling through our town.

The department maintains a traffic accident file which has been cited by state officials as being one of the best systems developed by police departments throughout the School Board Hears More About Sites

The members of the area school board heard unofficial observations from Site Committee Chairman J. Russell Hanson concerning the visit to four new schools when they met Monday evening. Mr. Hanson revealed that the group toured new constructions in Corry, Union City, Millcreek and Southwestern at Lakewood, particularly noticing the locations but advising also that building facilities could not be ignored.

The site committee noted that Union City has constructed its new school at a cost of ninety cents per cubic foot on a twenty acre plot; Corry school was built on an area comprising forty-four acres, and Lakewood used fifty-six acres. The most expensive school, which was not named by the committee, cost slightly over one dollar per cubic foot. A complete report of the schools visited and the comparison with the new construction at Beatty will be presented at the next meeting after being carefully studied by Mr. Hanson's committee.

Results of the evening school registrations indicated that classes in oil painting, typing (beginning and advanced), beginning shorthand, Petroleum engineering, and lip reading would be offered with a total enrollment of 113. These courses would be taught by the following instructors: Joseph Spence, A. J. Hawkins, Mrs. Raymond Baughman, Charles Cable, Penn State, and Frank Johnson, respectively.

A sabbatical leave request of Ross Carlson for the second semester was approved for the purpose of traveling. It was revealed by Dr. Carl E. Whipple that the board would be responsible for one-half of the teacher's salary up to $2500 and a substitute would be required at a cost of $15 per day.

Payments to Matthew Carroll and David N. Brown for construction costs in a total amount exceeding $80,000 were approved. Bills of $18,752.30 for furniture, books and supplies were ordered paid. New furniture for Beatty costing $17,683.61, which is not reimbursable, was ordered purchased.

Other items of interest included the approval of another adult driver training class of nine members; a letter was submitted by Dr. Whipple from A. L. Mitchell, acting headmaster at Whyalla Technical High School, Australia, praising the efforts of Miss Glasser who was an exchange teacher in his school; use of the high school auditorium was approved for the Girl Scouts, the Boy Choir and the Barbershoppers while tentative approval was granted Beach Dance Studio for use of Beatty auditorium.

state of Pennsylvania. A permanent record is initiated by the first report of an accident and continues to develop until the case is closed.

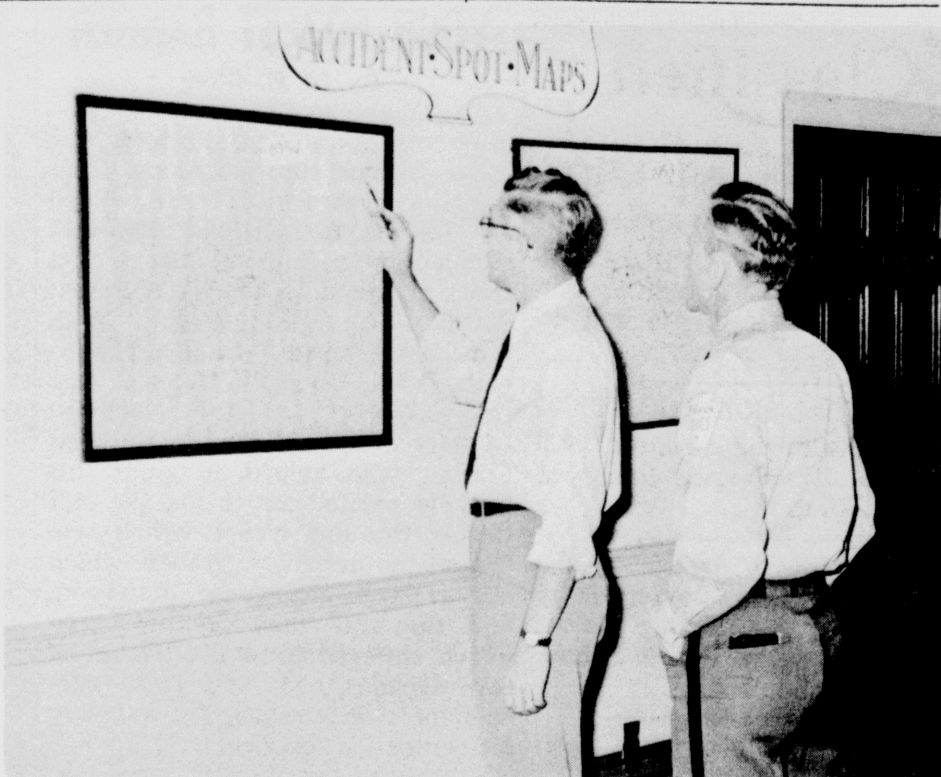

At the present time, insurance investigators and individuals may refer to mishaps in which they may have an interest as far back as 1927. Often delayed litigations are aided materially by facts produced from the files or names of investigating officers and eye witnesses are supplied who may be subpoenaed for personal testimonies.

The records are accumulated by Police Clerk Harry Beck under the supervision of Officer Howard Ristau.

The maps are available for inspection at any time, day or night and the members of the Warren borough police department urge the citizens to examine them in preparation for more cautious driving.

A survey of information revealed by the Warren police department's "Accident Spot Map for 1954" is as follows:

CHURCH ALTERATIONS. Recent work on the outside of the Presbyterian church located on Market st., Warren, has aroused the curiosity of the general public. Ludwig Peterson, contractor, and W. T. Corbett, member of the board of trustees of the church, were approached as they examined the structure recently. Mr. Corbett advised that the stones have been pointed up, copper gutters and valleys have been installed, corking, and painting all wood and cornices has been accomplished under the direction of Mr. Peterson.
